STUDENT LIFE

Your smile, your eyes, your glow! All of you in the picture frame of high school. Always being looked at, admired, criticized, critiqued. All your quirks being displayed for all of the school to see. Congratulations, you're famous. Throughout high school you presented yourself and what you were made of. Every move you made was publicity-good or bad.

Whether under the spotlight in your best dress or when dressed in a tie while representing a school team, snapshots turned into portaits of life. Would you be the prom king or queen, the next Junior Miss? Which class showed off the best school spirit? Who was named Hanover Central's Mr. Wildcat? All these competitions showcased students at their best.

elcome to our world. Every day brought new experience and a willingness to be flexible. Of course, like car mileage, your reality may vary. Constant change created new boundaries and forbidden territories. From banned purses to food restrictions, it was easy to say people felt turned "inside out." It began with the beginning of school in August and continued bit by bit throughout the year. A sense of difference carried itself throughout the halls, but that didn't bring down most Wildcats.

Pencil bags replaced purses, hall passes required agenda books, Spirit Week fashion included Saran Wrap "clothing," seniors came and went, couples coped, and freshmen survived to see their sophomore year. Wa raced out our doors each morning with clothes thrown on our backs and caught the bus, hitched a ride from a friend, or if really lucky, climbed into our own wheels and drove away. Those not so lucky walked to schooleven with the shirt tags inside out.

Some students worked for the quick dollar at places like McDonalds, Leo's, or Burger King. Most students would say a part time job wasn't what they wanted to be doing, but the money was worthwhile.

"Work isn't fun but, I need the money," said lievor Blandford.

Students didn't like working 20 hours a week hur hey had to.

"I work a lot of hours, but it's worth the pay," smed Cody Sikma.

However not all of the students with jobs were in it for the pay.

Some students worked to prepare them for a career. The majority of students would rather be out with friends partying and have a great time but time students were working like De Santago, Blondford, and Sikma who wanted to be ready trastort working as soon as graduated from of school.

Olivia Hanson said, "High school dating is fun while It lasts, but all good things come to an end. So it is easier to just save yourself and be single. There are many fish in the sea.

Many teens looked at dating differently. Some thought they felt true love for another and solemnly promised this is real. On the other hand, others said that dating was a waste of time and would lead to nowhere. The right answer was found within the person.

High school dating prepared students for the hittie. Many teens weaved their way through relationships to scope out the best "item" to have. Some knew the relationship was for show and had no intent to go any further.

STAYING IN BOUNDS

SPORTS
by Jess'ca Ramirez

id you ever notice that the only way to win most sports was to direct a ball or body to a goal but within specific boundaries? Soccer balls were trapped in a rectangle of netting. Basketballs arced through a circular rim. Bodies leaned within lanes to cross a finish line. Golf boundaries were larger, but that tiny ball still managed to find the rough or the occasional water hazard. Even entire teams were boxed in by specific boundaries, fearing penalties for crossing the line.

Staying in bounds and within the rules applied to all sports, on and off the court. Perhaps athletes had an advantage in crowded hallways or getting help from a teammate to find a seat in the caleteria. Some lessons applied in or out of season. In the end, whether it was the girls' soccer league title or John Petrov's individual wrestling championships, athletes learned boundaries were a way of life.

he girls' varsity soccer teram finished on top as the Northern Indiana Conference Champloris. The team took first place in conference with a 4-1 record. Since the Porter County Conference did not sponsor a soccer league, the soccer teams joined a number of other schools to form the soccer conference.

The team also had a pretty strong season in winning more than half their games including an 8-0 win against East Chicago Central.

Soccer required muscle strength in the legs to be able to run fast and long. They put in all of their effort and tried hard at every practice this season and it paid off. Head coach Robin Hofer and assistant coach Todd Hofer were extremely happy with how the girls performed. The girls also said they were happy with how they did. Their many days and hours of hard practice put into getting ready for this soccer season left smiles on many faces.

[Jamos Brat Whitkanack said, "Even though I statted late in the season, my time with the jW team helped prepare me for varsity more than I thought. Those JV kids have a lot of potential."

The soccer teams may not have been as good as the livisity team, but the players put into a much effort into practices and games. Soccer required a lot of leg muscles and endurance, so the soccer players had to work hard to build up muscle and train constantly to gain stamina.

The girls' JV team tried their best and put all of its effort into their games but still came Up short in the season with a 0-6 record. They had a close match against Crown Point High School Though, just getting edged 1-2.

Both soccer teams had a tough and rough season with multiple practices every week and with practices being multiple hours a day, it wasn't easy. Coach Todd Hofer pushed them all the way to get them prepared for the soccer season. Even though the girls didn't win any of there games they could still finish up the season knowing they tried their best and that it was worth the effort. And maybe a varisty spot in a year. Some sports enjoyed great reputations within the athletic greaters. Bore cook country definitely was included on that that for a very long time, the ream has been a PCC and invitational powerhouse, not to mention as following sectionals and beyond.

Veteron coach Steve Foulds led the team to regionals and again sent a linner, David Gladys, to state. The squad also earned its seventh consecutive PCC championable

"We couldn't have done anything without Coach Foulds and his help getting us i shape, and then keeping us in that shape throughout the year," Derek Smith said

David Gladys was a big part of the team. He ran throughout the summer just like he did every year to get in shape. Coach Chris York conducted a program in the summer to help get athletes in shape. For Gladys it meant running 150 miles by himself in the summer heat and humidity. It worked, Gladys made it to the IHSAA State. Meet, where he placed 74th among 199 competitors.

A three-match winning dreak to end the regiliar vaca or brooked the gilliugold team season. Along the way, there were winning and downs that but when it was time to get serious they did. All the girls ugreed that even during practices when they were just hanging out having fun, they got very serious during the matches.

It was fun, we generally won most of our matches as a team—said Ashley oy

The girls enjoyed winning whoever they played against but you win some and you lose same—the girls always didn't win with their young squad.

Some people had said that golf is not one of the mast interesting sports but not to the girts golf team. They were out there having as much fun as possible while keeping a serious attitude whenever they need to.

Unless you're a prodigy of Tiger Woods, driving over 300 yards alimitet every course and putting the ball into the hole with no problem or hesitation, then you are alim practicing as hard as you can to be just as good or better.

So in the end no matter what has happened during girls golf season the girls bonded tagether whether they are out in a game playing their hearts aut or having fun in practice, they just kept driving and putting away.

Megan Susko said "We had a great season" the presides were hard but it all paid off in the end. They put all their effort line this sport and come out with a great season.

The girls practiced five days a week for almost three hours at a time. They went through hours of conditioning and taining to get as good as they could. The practices were lough and had them gasping for breath, it took a lot of energy to be a valleyful player, but they said it was all worth it in the end and they are gistal with how they finished the season.

Most of the girls planned to play valleyball next year, too, but they hoped they will be good enough to play on the vorsity valleyball team instead of the JV team. Of course the freshmen hoped to mow up to IV or even varsity if the opportunity exists.

"I didn't know if I was going to come back this year. I'm glad I did."

ighting the spike was what the girls' varsity volleyball team tried very hard to do and put their best efforts forward throughout the season. When it came to working together and communicating, the girls were an top of their game. They endeavored through every win, and loss and in the end the girls were there for each other. No motter what the outcome, their progression was significant. According to some of the girls, it wasn't always easy.

Sophomore Tiffany Gibson said, "Everyone gets along, but sometimes we have miscommunications that are hard to get through without creating amborriers."

Gooch Michelle Thompson played a big role in providing the glue that bound the teom together. Whenever the team hit a bump in the tood, she held meetings to clear the air. This helped team players to be able to go out on the court and play aggressively without having unneeded guilt on their shoulders. By the end of the season the procedure worked well.

"Our biggest competition was Lowell High School," Jessica Dockerson saic Some of the many high schools that they went up against had equal talent. Still the team stuck to their fundamentals and tried their best to win. If not_it pushed them to try horder and work as a team even more.

"Because I've worked hard and gave my all, winning MVP is a great accomplishment!"

The captains work of leading the squad's pep and spirit paid off at the annual PCC pep black competition where they placed second. With a record of 14-6, the wrestlers lived up to it, Hanover had placed faurthout of eight teams in IHSAA Sectionals. John Petrov and Andrew Sands ware arowned Sectional Champions in their weight divisions. Paul Petrov, Jeremy Olson, Marcus Cooper, and Brandon Keaton all also placed and advanced to the regional round.

"I started wrestling my senior year because I wanted to be on a winning team senior Chris Siebanoller said.

Their victories were earned by partaking in dual meets

"In a duel, you first weigh in and then you get about 30 minutes to eat and warm up," explained Rene deSantiago. "After that the team captairis go out to the mat to see the coin loss and if we win it, then the other team sends out their westler first and then the coach chooses one of us to westle him. If you win the match by points, then you get four team points. If you pin the wrestler, then it's six team points."

Following behind his alumni brother George Petrov, John Petrov advanced to the state tournament to prove his wrestling ability. Petrov wrestlied with a foot injury and wasn't able to advance, but qualifying for state was a great achievment.

OUTSIDE THE BOX

ACADEMICS & ORGANIZATIONS

by Iessica Ramire:

Teachers, guidance counselors, principals, and parents had students at the school for one main purpose: to make the grade. Good grades almost ensured a stable future. Common goal: from high school to college to be a doctor or lawyer or some other career choice that would provide for their pupil.

There were many ways to achieve this. Apart from the required basic classes, students joined the National Honor Society, Student Council, Key Club, or various other groups. Some students took the challenge of advanced placement classes. Still others showcase their talents on state-ranked academic leams. The Math team ranked 13th, Social Studies, 15th; Interdisciplinary, 19th: Science, 20th, and Fine Arts was 27th.

Navigating the known in classes but exploring individual interests in clubs gave students a chance to keep one foot inside the box while cautiously getting a glimpse of the outside world.

A BIGGER BOX

utside the walls of our boxy school was a much bigger box full of much bigger things. Stretching across 133rd Avenue were traffic cones galore as they marked the borderline of where the road ended and the unfinished black tar began. Buildings, such as those in Lincoln Plaza, were refurbished to match the town's facelift. New restaurants opened and closed as the many Cedar Lake citizens sampled them during recessionary times. In the center of the community box, dirtbike riders skimmed an icy, man-made track to the lake finish line. Our box held together through fierce snowstorms, sub-zero weather, and floods, not to mention high ags prices.

With a growing population of 10,634 people, our little community's box continued to expand. Close proximity to Chicago helped make this town a convenient place to live. Home to Hanover Central High School, a 4-Star school, our big box community continued to house many smaller boxes.
